I had a pleasant and wonderful study course in Sri Lanka between November, 2012 and April, 2013. During the course, I not only learnt a lot about the Sinhala language but also made friends with many students in the University of Colombo and travelled around Sri Lanka.

There's no wonder that the days in Sri Lanka is completely different from the days in China. I think I was quite lucky to have such skilful teachers to help me learn Sinhala language, Sinhala culture and Sinhala literature which made me comprehend the word "Sinhala" more profoundly. In terms of Sinhala, they are more professional than my Chinese teachers. Besides, I had the opportunity to talk to the native speakers to improve my spoken Sinhala. As a matter of fact, I spoke in Sinhala with everyone I met and they would say "Shock!" which made me feel very proud.

What's more, I had a fancy experience of study tour. I had never thought about having a long-distance travel with many classmates and teachers. However, I had three wonderful trips with lovely classmates and respectful teachers. We visited the hometown of Martin Wickramasinghe, Ritigala, Polonnaruwa and Anuradhapura. It was really excellent!

The experience I gained in Sri Lanka is a long story to tell. All in all, I would never forget the days in Sri Lanka.
